Vine launched a week ago today, yet has still managed to swing to the top 10 free apps in the App Store, and has taken the number one spot in the Social category. But how does that measure up against other Twitter-integrated video sharing services like Socialcam, Cinemagram, Telly and Viddy?

According to Keyhole analytics, Vine is twice as popular as the next biggest video-sharing app on Twitter, SocialCam, even after being removed from Apple's featured section after a slight porn incident.

Almost half of the videos on Twitter in the last week came from Vine — approximately 243,000 of them, to be more specific. The next app with video links on Twitter was Socialcam, with 120,000 video links on the world's briefest social network.

After that, Cinemagram and Telly are nearly tied for third and fourth place, with Viddy bringing up the rear.

The most RTed Vine on the platform over the
